An Unusual Shipment of Wild Beasts Brought from the Jungle into Hoboken. Although six giraffes were led through the streets of Hoboken on Thursday, the people who thronged the thoroughfares had but few opportunities to judge of the true appearance of the beasts. They were just from Africa, and were very wild. On the street no two were at all alike except in regard to the strap on each one's head and the man hanging on to it. It was impossible to say which side of the street any one of them was on at any moment. An instantaneous photograph would have shown one fixed like a civil engineer's tripod with a man tugging at it, another leap ing along tugging at its man, another striking out in all directions like a Chinese drework. still another pirouetting round and round like a lady at a ball, and one or two more apparently on their heads with their feet at that altitude that their heads usually attain. They were following a truck on which were laden a full-grown cow antelope, an eland, and a baby hippopotamus, and behind which, much against their will, two young elephants were being at times turged along by means of a rope tied to the vehice, and at other times unded on by a negro, who whopsed them with a rawhide and coviced as much dust from their backs as if he were beating a couple of long-neglected rugs. Apparenting a chitah, five appas, and fences whonever one of the elephants or a giraffe was more than usually demonstrative. Behind ali these, and forming a separate procession, there followed four ostriches, three baby hons, a leopard, a chitah, five appas, nine hamadeyas baboons, five wart hogs, sixty suali monkeys of various sorts, a giant porcupine, and a number of muskcats, lynxes, swams, peacocks, and innumerable small birds. They constituted the largest importation of African quadrupeds and biped sever landed here, and were consigned to the Messrs, Reiche of New York and Hoboken. Their cost was about $30,000.

Reiche's men left Germany last August for their farm in lower Nubla, and in October, having equipped seventy or eighty natives with horses, weapons, and ammunition, set out into the jungle and killed a great variety of old animals and birds whose young were old enough to be weaned. These were taken to the Reiche farm on the banks of the Dinda River, in lower Nubla, and fed on goats' milk until they were able to attempt the journey across the Nublan Desert to the point of shipment, Suakin. A drove of 150 goats accompanied them, and when their milk gave out their lesh served as food for the linns, leopards, and negroes. The steamship at Suakin lay out in the stream, and the animals were taken to Ocean Vessels Falling in with Icebergs-The

The new fron steamship India, from Hamburg. May 14, to Seager Brothers, in this city. with 494 steerage passengers, which arrived or Wednesday, reports the most exciting of all the many recent experiences with icebergs in the north Atlantic Ocean. The first two big iceberge were seen from her deck on May 24 in latitude 44° 25', longitude 44° 52'. Next morning two other gigantic leebergs were sighted at To'clock, and soon afterward the ship entered a dense fog. This fog proved to be occasioned occasionally, the vessel was seen to be literally surrounded with towering blocks of ice. Mr. Horn, the chief officer, counted thirty-five huge bergs, and noted many hundreds of Horn, the chief officer, counted thirty-five huge bergs, and noted many hundreds of smaller floating islands of ice. The ship was handled with a treme care, and had to be run slowly and to be frequently backed at short notice as the monstrous hils of crystal swung in her pathway.

At 10 clock in the forenoon, when the fog lifted for an instant, the India was seen to be grazing the side of an loeberg 500 feet square and 120 feet high. At the same instant her bow struck a projection and a hole five feet long and a foot and a half wide was torn in the thick iron plates of her side. The rent was above the water mark. It was covered within and without with bolted planks, after five hours' work. The passengers, who had been able to reach over the ship's rail and feet the side of the big iceberg, uttered exchanations of delight over the unexpected entertainment, but the officers, who has become less bout feebergs, and were aware of their tendency to turn upside down at a moment's notice, when the submerged portion has become less balky than the exposed part, were enceedingly giad to escape from their neighboritood. The enief engineer made some sketches of the icebergs, which were sligger and more numerous than any of the sailors had ever seen. One or two looked like hills of crystal and snow, one bore a ruids recombinate to a Gothic church with a steeple and another was like a hage, sharre-pointed tower. As the sin shone on them their hues altered so that some looked blue, some pink, some white, and one monstrous hill was black on its shady side and clear as crystal where the sun smote it. Chief Officer Horn was celebrating the twenty-sighth anniversary of his going to see, and he said that he had not seen in all those years so many or such his electors, when she reached her pier in floboken the passengers drew up resolutions of thanks to the Captain and officers for bringing thom salely to America.
